

ALEXANDRIA.

FRIDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 2.

ACCORDING TO the Washington correspondent of the Richmond Dispatch, Reprecentatives Wise and O'Ferrall, of Virginia authorize the statement that they differ with Governor Lee of their State, and Senator Blackburn, of Kentucky, in respect of the nomination of a Southern man for the second place on the next national democratic ticket, Mr. O'Ferrall saying: "Better wait fifty years than do so injudicious a thing. So far as the importance of the office is concerned the South would better have Public Printer than Vice President." Is the South never to assert her equality in the Union of which she forms so lare failure party, to be forever however of wood and draware of water for their few Northern affiliators, and to continue to the end of time to bring a solid South to the support of any national ticket the latter may select? As Governor Lee says, the Northern democrats expect as a natural thing that every Southern democrat will cheerfully vote for whomsoever Northern democrats nominate, but that it is vastly different with them whenever a Southern man is talked about as a probable candidate for their support. The country is now again one and indivisible, and any one part of it is just as loyal and patriotic as any other part, and all its people are free and equal fellow-citizens of a common country. Then, too, the democratic, is the na tional party of the country. To hear there fore that a Northern democrat objects to the nomination of a Southern democrat for Vice President on the ground that it would provoke sectional opposition in the North and revive the war feeling of that section, now that a quarter of a century has elapsed since the war, suggests at least a remarkable degree of insincerity on the part of that man. or else shows that the professions of peace and good will heretofore expressed by Northern democrats for their Southern al lies were gross attempts at deception To hear that a Southern representative is willing to act in accordance with such views implies a sad change in the character of his constituents. It is not the bare value, ac tual or contingent, of a place on the national ticket that Southern democrats desire, but the recognition of the rights and equal ity of their section, that would be manifest ed to the world by such a nomination. In respect of the policy of such a nomination,it may be said that the democrats of the North are entirely too practical to permit such anunprofitable thing as war sentiment to prevent them from supplying the few electoral votes necessary, with those of the South, to retain their possession of the national government and nearly all its honors, emoluments and

MR. COLEMAN, the Commissioner of the Agricultural Bureau, being a man of plain and practical common sense, and withal having the real interests of the country at heart, is opposed to increasing that bureau of the department, and the transfer of its seat of history. A discussion ensued on the to the expensive condition of a department, duties to the state and territorial experithe head of which shall be a member of the Cabinet. There is no more reason why the agricultural interests should be specially represented in the Cabinet than that the commercial, the mechanical and the professional should be.

ONE OF the reasons assigned by those who favor the repeal of the internal revenue system, is that such a repeal would abolish thousands of federal offices. But many of products have a value equal to the cost of those who are opposed to the internal revenue system, and who base their pposition to it on the ground referred to, are, strange to say, in favor of establishing a government postal telegraph, which would create a great many more offices than are provided for by the internal revenue law.

Ir was bad enough that Col. Nicholas Smith, Horace Greely's sou in-law, should have sent a bill to Mr. Oviogton for the amount of his actual expenses incurred while acting as "best man" at the recent wedding of the latter; but it was worse that Mr. Ovington did not pay the bill at once, and thank Providence that he was thereby enabled to be well rid of the Colonel.

FROM WASHINGTON.

[Special Correspondence of the Alexa. GAZETTE] Washington, D. C., Dec. 2, 1887. Washington is rapidly filling up with the people who compose so large a portion of its population during Congressional sessions. A great many Southern members of Congress, Senators as well as Representatives, have arrived during the last day or two, and the Metropolitan Hotel, which seems to he even more of Southern beadquarters now than it was last year, is crowded with that
